The Waymaker

As South Sudan suffers civil war, genocide and displacement of millions, Mirah, as an Australian journalist, is determined to live a life with a voice for the helpless. Her tenacity to endure through injury, and grapple with PTSD in bringing their story to the world is remarkable. Despite her achievements, her thorn in her flesh causes her to haphazardly navigate her decision making and brings consequences she must endure.

Meanwhile, Stephen as a nurse from South Sudan, experiences beauty and tragedy in his country which rips apart his core belief in a God who cares. Will he go to any lengths to achieve freedom for a country he loves at the cost of losing his soul?

With chaos clamoring for attention, will Mirah and Stephen both discover a way through their struggles or will they lose themselves in the fight?
